

WHY WE LOVE IT

Hello Lit Clique readers!

Are you like me? Do you sit and think how the hell did I get here? Is this really my entire life? What have I lost to become the person I am now? Because I do – and then I turned 30 and promptly set my entire life on fire in what I call my ‘millennial midlife crisis’.

Enter So Old, So Young by Grant Ginder.

Our Lit Clique pick for March is a sharp and tender gut-punch of a novel that explores these questions. It puts the spotlight on the millennial experience of growing up and growing apart from those you love, of wondering how you got here and what you lost, of the intimacy and pain of connection and community. It is messy, it is funny, it will bring tears to your eyes, but most of all, it is heartbreakingly human.

Enjoy! And if you’re in the midst of your millennial midlife crisis too, I hope this puts a smile on your face and lets you know, you’re not alone ❤️
